A Belgian airliner made an emergency landing after a cat got into the cockpit and attacked the co-pilot. The flight from Brussels to Vienna had been in the air 20 minutes when a passenger's pet escaped from its cage. It slipped into the cockpit when meals were being delivered to the crew and became agitated and nervous. The cat scratched the copilot's arm. To avoid a "cat-astrophe," the pilot and 58 passengers returned to Brussels.

Schumer slams Bush proposal for national intelligence chief

BY MICHAEL CLANCY amNewYork Staff Writer

The White House "is doing a terrible job" on homeland security and President Bush's proposal for a director of national intelligence would be a "toothless tiger," Sen. Charles Schumer said vesterday.

In an editorial board meeting with amNewYork, Schumer said creating a new director of national intelligence without budgetary power and the ability to hire and fire department heads, including the CIA director, would not improve U.S. intelligence gathering.

"It would make it a toothless tiger," Schumer said. "You may as well have the 9/11 commission report, wonderful document that it is, sitting on a shelf gathering dust." New York's senior Democratic senator called Rep. Porter Goss (R-Fla.), whom Bush nominated yesterday to run the CIA, "a good man."

Schumer noted that Goss has New York roots and said he didn't have a problem with putting a Republican in that post. But he added that Goss' confirmation hearings would provide a good opportunity to examine the 9/11 commission's recommendation to create a national intelligence czar with real power.

"My questions to Porter Goss are going to be are you for ceding your authority, or some of it, to the director of national intelligence? What's your position on that? Why would you take this job, if you were gonna give that up? But if you're not, I won't support you," Schumer said.

Schumer also demanded to know who leaked the name of Mohammed Naeem Noor Khan, the Al Qaeda computer guru captured in Pakistan.

Sen. Charles Schumer told amNewYork that Rep. Porter Goss (R-Fla.), President Bush's choice to be the new director of the CIA, is a "good man," but that the United States needs a director of national intelligence who can control this country's intelligence gathering.

Khan's name was leaked to reporters last week as the administration defended the latest terror alerts that warned of strikes against financial institutions in America.

"The leak of this man's name may have been the greatest mistake in the war on terror," Schumer said. "The word is that no one knew this guy was caught and they were having him interconnect computers with all sorts of Al Qaeda agents and they were not yet finished. The Pakistani Interior Minister said it's a disgrace that the U.S. leaked this. They blamed us and said that if we had more time, it might even have led to (Osama) bin Laden."

But Schumer did defend the terrorist warning issued on Sunday, Aug. 1, saying that he also would have made the information public because it involved financial institutions, truck bombs and terrorists crossing land borders at Canadian or Mexico — three Al Qaeda hallmarks.

"When you get that kind of information, you have no choice but to tell law enforcement," Schumer said. "You have to tell five or six hundred law enforcement officials and once you do that, it leaks."

Feds say tech wiz ran terrorist site out of New Jersey

NEW BRUNSWICK - Federal authorities are investigating New Jersey resident Mazen Mokhtar, a technologically savvy Internet whiz who they say operated a Web site soliciting funds and recruiting fighters for the Taliban and other Muslim warrior groups.

Mokhtar is listed in Internet directories as the registrant and administrative and technical contact for the Web site www.minna.com, which authorities said is an exact duplicate of one run by Babar Ahmad, who was arrested last week in London and charged with aiding terrorists. A neighbor, William Copprue, said plainclothes law enforcement officers searched Mokhtar's apartment several months ago, hauling away several large black bags of items in a search that lasted about half the day.

The FBI's Newark field office referred inquiries on Mokhtar to the New Haven, Conn., office, which declined comment yesterday.

Ahmad has not been charged with any crime, but an arrest warrant issued July 28 by a federal judge in Connecticut accuses Ahmad of running several Internet sites used to support and raise money for the Taliban regime in Afghanistan and Mujahadeen Islamic militants in other countries.

But Mokhtar's friends paint a far different picture of a devout, peaceful Muslim who taught classes on Islam and sometimes led Friday prayer services.

"It doesn't seem like he was involved with anything like that," said Asim Uzmani, a board member of the New Brunswick Islamic Center, where Mokhtar volunteered to lead prayers at the small storefront mosque about twice a month. Uzmani said he spoke to Mokhtar a few days ago. (AP)

Mosque leaders get no bail in terror case

Yassin Muhiddin Aref, left, and Mosharref Hossain are led out of federal court after being denied bail vesterday in Albany.

ALBANY — A federal judge yesterday rejected bail for two leaders of an Albany mosque charged in an FBI sting involving a purported plot to assassinate the Pakistani ambassador to the United Nations.

Federal Magistrate David Homer said the government has sufficiently shown that Yassin Muhiddin Aref, 34, and Mohammed Mosharref Hossain, 49, are a threat to the community and are a flight risk.

A 19-count indictment, unsealed Monday, charges Aref and Hossain with conspiring to launder money and promote terrorism. It did not provide details about allegations they are tied to an extremist group linked to Al Qaeda.

The indictment chronicles exchanges of money that authorities allege was for a fictitious missile sale. It claims that in a Feb. 12 meeting, the men believed the attack on the ambassador would take place the following week. Authorities said the men were paid $50,000 and Hossain was to disguise the source of the money by writing checks - $2,000 at a time - back to the informant from his businesses, which include rental properties.

An FBI informant who told Aref and Hossain he was an arms dealer asked the two suspects to launder money for profit from the sale of a shoulder-fired missile that would be used to kill the diplomat in New York City, according to the federal complaint.

Pakistani officials have protested the FBI's tactics used in the sting operation. Pakistan's Foreign Ministry spokesman Masood Khan condemned the FBI sting operation, saying it was bizarre and dangerous.

"This has increased our ambassador's and our mission's vulnerability . . . and could have endangered the life of our ambassador." Khan said in a statement. He said Pakistan had filed a protest with the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad Aref and Hossain have been jailed since Thursday. Yesterday, defense lawyers Kevin Luibrand and Terry Kindlon asked Homer to set bail, saying their clients were needed by their families. They also called the case entrapment since there was no assassination plot.

Aref's lawyer, Kindlon, said the entire case is based on government fabrication, "The facts of this case exist in the imagination of the government," he said.

Contract talks stalemate

Police and firefighters announced an impasse vesterday in their contract negotiations with the Bloomberg administration, refusing to rule out a strike or sickouts during the Republican National Convention.

"Everyone has a limit, and the mayor needs to know we're close to our limit," said Stephen Cassidy, president of the Uniformed Firefighters Association, at a press conference at City Hall.

For the last two weeks or so, off-duty police officers have been showing up at Mayor Michael Bloomberg's daily public appearances and picketing outside Madison Square Garden, the site of the Republican National Convention beginning Aug. 30.

Several other city unions, such as District Council 37, the city's largest, have already accepted a 5% raise plus $1,000 over three years with 2% coming from productivity enhancements such as lower pay and benefits for new hires.

A mayor's spokesman said yesterday that the city's last offer to the police and fire unions was a $1,000 lump sum payment plus an 8% pay hike - though 5% of the raise would come from pro-ductivity enhancements. The police and firefighter unions said they had no intention of accepting productivity enhancements, which they denounced as "givebacks."

Police have been without a contract since July 31, 2002, and firefighters since May 31. 2002. The situation fits a pattern of retroactive contracts and negotiations that routinely ignore expiration dates and end in arbitration.

But vesterday, the police and fire union representatives said they deserve more significant raises than other city employees. The police union declared an impasse in its negotiations several weeks ago, while the firefighters said they reached the same conclusion this week.

"Mike Bloomberg says we're no different than people that push paper," said Cassidy. "It's an insult to the firefighters and police officers who risk their lives every day." (AP)

Albany puts back $332M in cuts to education aid

ALBANY The Legislature yesterday restored almost $332 million in cuts to student financial aid and in funding to public colleges while quaranteeing no increase in public college tuition for New York resident undergraduates. But whether Gov. George Pataki would veto the action that's part of more than $1 billion in spending the Legislature plans to add to his executive budget remained unclear. Pataki said he agreed to provisions of the education bill approved by lawmakers, but that he has concerns about how the Legislature plans to pay for it all.

States depend on Medicaid cash

ALBANY States lack the political will to scale back Medicaid because they have come to depend on the health coverage for the poor as a federal cash cow to fund some other state expenses while subsidizing hospitals and nursing homes, research shows. Instead, the states facing billion-dollar deficits in recent years cut other programs, increased taxes, or secured even more federal Medicaid dollars through the system that matches state spending levels, according to the study by the Nelson A. Rockefeller Institute of Government in Albany.

NJ man released in terror trial

PATTERSON, N.J. A New Jersey man, the fourth defendant accused of using a Texas-based charity to help finance terrorists, was ordered released from a Dallas jail yesterday by a federal magistrate who noted that instead of fleeing the U.S. he had testified before the grand jury that eventually indicted him. Abdulrahman Odeh pleaded not guilty yesterday to charges including conspiracy, aiding a terrorist group and money laundering. The 45-year-old deli owner in Paterson was ordered to stand trial in October. Odeh was the N.J. director of Holy Land Foundation for Belief and Development, which prosecutors accused of being a financial supporter of Hamas. (AMNY and AP)

MEMSDIGEST Group ditches highway, calls for protest in park

BY ADAM HUTTON Special to amNewYork

Three weeks after accepting the city's alternative to its planned protest of the Republican National Convention on Central Park's Great Lawn, the antiwar group United for Peace and Justice shifted gears yesterday and said that picketing along the West Side Highway is not acceptable.

"This is a frontal assault on the right to assemble by a mayor who wants to protect the Republican party," said group spokesman Bill Dobbs. "He's rolled out the red carpet for the delegates while pushing protesters to the fringes.

The city Parks Department denied the group's second application to protest in the park, this time in the East Meadow. To the protesters' way of thinking, if what the city said was true and the Great Lawn is too small for the 250,000 people planning to protest, then the meadow should be large enough to accommodate the crowd.

The city sees it differently. In a letter denying the second application, the department said United for Peace and Justice was asking for a permit for "essentially the same event" and therefore the department "must deny your application for the same reasons.

Children from a Harlem youth group gather in Central Park's East Meadow yesterday. The Parks Department denied United for Peace and Justice's second application to protest in in Central Park — this time in the East Meadow — yesterday.

"We're shocked that the city has rejected this application without even seriously considering it," Dobbs said. 'We're consulting with our lawyers and asking people to contact the Mayor and urge him to change his mind." A spokesman for Mayor Michael Bloomberg said the protest group would make better use of its time and energy by accepting defeat and focusing on planning their event along the highway. "With less than three weeks to go, the organizers need to concentrate their efforts on making the necessary arrangements and working with the city to ensure a safe event and

Budget's moving, 4½ months later

BY JOEL STASHENKO Associated Press Writer

Nearly 4½ months late, the state Legislature finally started passing a new state budget vesterday as lawmakers decried the longest budget impasse in state history.

The first of a dozen bills embodying the 2004-05 budget to pass was one boosting state education aid by $740 million in the upcoming school year. Legislative leaders said they would complete the budget adoption process by early Friday, though much of what lawmakers planned to pass hadn't been agreed to vesterday by Gov. George . Pataki

The budget was supposed to have been in place by April 1. Despite the long stalemate between the Democrat-dominated state Assembly and the Republican governor - and the seemingly endless debate about the new spending plan - many legislators as usual grumbled they did not know enough about what they were voting on when they started to see budget measures.

"We don't know what the total cost of this budget is," Long Island Republican Assemblyman Thomas Barraga said. "What's the final figure and where do we get all the revenues to pay for it?"

After some confusion, state Assembly Ways and Means Chairman Committee Herman Farrell Jr. said the budget will total about $101 billion, or 3% more than the previous state budget. The Legislature has already appropriated more than half that amount through a series of short-term emergency spending bills since April 1.

Farrell said improvements such as higher education aid would not have happened in the 2004-05 budget without Assembly Democrats resisting some aspects of the spending plan Pataki advanced in January.

A Queens man has admitted meeting with a high-ranking member of Al Qaeda in Pakistan in a scheme to smuggle money, night-vision goggles and other equipment to the terrorist network. officials confirmed yesterday.

The terror suspect. Mohammed Junaid Babar, secretly pleaded guilty in June to multiple charges of providing material support to a terrorist organization. He agreed to cooperate with authorities as part of a plea deal.

According to a court transcript made public yesterday, Babar told a judge he met with an unidentified Al Qaeda official earlier this year in South Waziristan, a tribal area near the border of Afghanistan. He said he and others had provided money, goggles, sleeping bags and other goods to the terrorist group beginning in 2003.

"I understood that the money and supplies that I had given to Al Qaeda were supposed to used in Afghanistan against U.S. or international forces," he said.

Babar, 29, a U.S. citizen of Pakistani descent, also described arranging lodging and transportation for recruits to a "jihad training camp" and providing ammonium nitrate for a bomb plot in London. (AP)

Who's that boy? Twins face to face for first time

Six days after being separated in a delicate 17-hour operation, the 2-year-old Aguirre twins emerged from sedation yesterday, waking up enough to watch TV and steal their first, tentative glances at each other.

The two boys from the Philippines, who were connected at the tops of their heads until last Wednesday night, were breathing on their own and propped into semisitting positions in their sideby-side beds at Montefiore Medical Center in the Bronx. An Associated Press reporter and photographer were allowed into the twins' room in the pediatric intensive care unit vesterday. Though still drowsy and drifting in and out of sleep, the boys occasionally looked at each other. One of the boys, Clarence, reached for a rattle held by a nurse. The eyes of both followed their mother, Arlene Aguirre, and they watched kids' programs on the television set above their beds

Aguirre gently coaxed them to look at each other. "Carl, where's your brother?" she murmured at his side. "Clarence, where's vour brother?"

Until yesterday, the boys had seen each other's faces only in mirrors and photographs. Doctors said they were extremely pleased by the boys' progress.

"We really expected them to do well but they've exceeded our best expectations," said Dr. David Staffenberg, the plastic surgeon who helped separate them with four major operations over 11 months.

"This is by far the earliest time babies like this have been able to come off the ventilator," Staffenberg said. "They have been moving along at light speed."

The boys' pediatrician, Dr. Robert Marion, said, "It's unbelievable. They're doing better than almost any kids who've had craniofacial surgery, let alone this complex surgery.'

The coming days and weeks will bring more milestones. Now that they can sit up, Clarence and Carl will soon be able to eat by mouth instead of through a tube, Marion said. Physical therapists will teach them to walk. (AP)

Hil rocks the vote Judge undermines strict ferry policy Sen. Clinton: New voters crucial to this year's election

Sen. Hillary Clinton urged union workers yesterday to register as many new voters as possible and to take roles as poll workers and voting monitors because, she said, Republicans will try to disqualify or discourage potential Democratic voters in November.

"I am convinced we are going to win this election but I also am convinced the other side is going to do everything it can to take it away from us," Clinton told delegates at the state AFL-CIO convention.

She said she has noticed that poll workers tend to be elderly and will eventually have to be replaced.

The senator said the 2004 election will be especially

Sen. Hillary Clinton

crucial in determining the nation's immediate course.

"There never has been a more important election, with more at stake," she said. "This election will set the direction of the country because there are two very different visions."

Clinton's brief appearance at a midtown hotel focused mainly on what she called the Bush White House's failed economic policies.

"This is an administration that believes America became great because of rich people . . that only people of wealth and means create jobs," she said. "We're not unique because of rich people, but because we created the ladder of opportunity . . . with a balance between those with wealth and power and the ordinary people who built the country and keep it going." She said the Republicancontrolled Congress had stalled a transportation bill that was "the most important job creation bill in the Senate." (AP)

A judge has ruled that a Staten Island ferry assistant captain should not have been suspended based on results from an alcohol test, casting legal doubt on the city's zero-tolerance testing policy imposed after a crash last year killed 11 people.

The test was irrelevant because the captain, Robert Sander had been tested while on dock duty and had not been scheduled to pilot any boats or carry out other "safe-ty-sensitive" tasks, Judge Kara Miller ruled July 29.

Miller also said the results were flawed because of mechanical problems with the testing equipment, The New York Times reported yesterday. She recommended the results be thrown out.

Tom Cocola, a spokesman with the city Department of Transportation, declined to comment on the case to the Times. Transportation Commissioner Iris Weinshall will decide whether to accept the judge's recommendation not to punish Sander, who was suspended after failing the breath test March 22. The pilot of the ferry that crashed Oct. 15, Richard Smith, has said he blacked out after taking medications that made him lose consciousness at the helm.

Smith pleaded guilty last week to 11 counts of manslaughter.

Following the crash, the DOT instituted a zero-tolerance policy for ferry employees who failed drug or alcohol tests. (AP)

affair with transit

BY JOE RAPPAPORT amNewYork Columnist

New York's governors don't often get the credit when they do right by transit riders - and they almost never get the blame when something ages wrong, either,

For instance, let's see a show of hands from everyone who thinks former Mayor Giuliani got you those handy monthly and weekly Metro-Card passes. In fact, Giuliani had nothing to do with them. He sat on the sidelines during the debate over how to use a transit surplus in 1997 (they actually had a surplus!) and watched as Gov. Pataki ordered the Metropolitan Transportation Authority to introduce the discounts.

Pataki can tell the MTA what to do, since he appoints the MTA's chairman. executive director and many of the MTA board members. Most important, he also decides how much state money to fork over to city subways and buses.

More often, though, governors like Pataki and his predecessor Mario Cuomo have distanced themselves from anything that happens in the city's subways. Such as the last three fare hikes, which Pataki said he didn't want. But did he do anything to stop them? I think we know the answer to that.

This hands-off tactic doesn't alwavs work. In 1985. Gov. Cuomo was savaged by straphangers and the Daily News when he wouldn't act to stop a 10-cent hike, from 90cents to $1. The fare went up. but Cuomo appointed a task force that worked to keep the fare at a buck for the next four years.

This year, Pataki is once again the target for groups upset by the proposed fare hike. They say he's to blame. since he stiffed the transit system on funding. Riffing on the MTA's idea of selling naming rights for subway stations. are in for a shock

Senators pitch plans to keep the lights on

BY ADAM HUTTON Special to amNewYork

Sens, Charles Schumer and Hillary Clinton promoted separate energy plans yesterday to prevent another blackout like last year's summer nightmare that left 50 million people without electricity.

Both proposals are meant to keep the juice flowing well enough to meet national needs and prevent economic losses, estimated to be billions of dollars in lost commerce caused by the Aug. 14 blackout.

Schumer released a 10-page report suggesting that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) should be eliminated and replaced by a new agency responsible for setting and enforcing reliability standards. He compared the nation's power grid to its highway system and the proposed agency to the Department of Transportation.

"Last year's blackout made it very clear: We need an office with the authority and the know-how to improve the reliability of the grid," Schumer said. "This office is going to hold the utilities accountable for providing the quality service New Yorkers and all Americans deserve."

Clinton, meanwhile, is still promoting the Electric Reliability Act (ERA) of 2004, which she introduced with three other senators earlier this year. Similar regulations proposed as part of the Senate's energy bill last fall were "held hostage" by Republicans who opposed other parts of the energy package, Clinton said.

Because the blackout was caused, in part, by tree limbs hanging too close to power lines, in violation of voluntary reliability standards established by the North American Electric Reliability Council (NERC), what the nation needs are mandatory standards established and enforced by FERC, Clinton said. The ERA would give FERC the authority to make the rules and punish the companies that don't fall in line.

"The critical first step is to get Congress and the administration to implement mandatory standards," Clinton told amNewYork. "If we can get those underway, then we can begin to establish a whole new system.'

The only real roadblock to progress once the standards are in place is the Bush administration, which has packed FERC with people sympathetic to electric companies' desire to be free from regulation. But the creation of a new agency wouldn't solve that problem she said. "If we created a different agency that would have appointments by the President, then we'd run into the same problem," Clinton told amNewYork.

That's exactly the reason, however, why FERC must be eliminated, Schumer told amNewYork.

"They're not going to be their own watchdogs," he said.

Mold problem grows at New Jersey schools; families file health suit

TRENTON — Bonnie Tuttle watched her adolescent son go from healthy to seriously ill during the school year. Now she and the parents of nine other students are suing the public school district over mold contamination they say made their children sick.

The lawsuit, filed Monday Superior Court in in Woodbury, accuses the Washington Township Board of Education of mishandling a chronic mold problem at two middle schools in the Gloucester County community. The suit demands that the district educate the plaintiffs' children elsewhere, until it can rid their schools of mold. It also wants to make the disallow any student who becomes ill after classes resume to transfer.

Students and teachers at Orchard Valley and Chestnut Ridge middle schools have complained of headaches, rashes, fatigue, difficulty breathing and other symptoms, the lawsuit says, with toxic conditions in the schools reaching "epic proportions" last school year.

Tuttle says her son. Jordan. showed symptoms on the third day of sixth grade last fall and that by March a doctor certified him too sick to attend school. By that point, he had missed 33 days, she said.

The mold problem surfaced shortly after the schools were built in 1988. Louis Giansante, the Moorestown lawyer representing the parents and children, said yesterday the district's remediation effort has been slipshod. (AP)

Arab Bank in the hot seat

Five families of U.S. citizens killed in terrorist attacks in Israel added their names to an $875 million lawsuit filed last month against Arab Bank, accusing it of channeling money to Palestinian terrorist groups.

The amended complaint, filed in federal court in the Eastern District of New York early yesterday, claims the Texas-based Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development used the New York branch of the Arab Bank to transfer money to Hamas a Palestinian terrorist organization blamed for dozens of attacks in Israel.

The U.S. Justice Department last week indicted the Holy Land Foundation for providing millions of dollars in support to Hamas.

The lawsuit, Linde vs. Arab Bank, also claims that Arab bank made insurance payments to beneficiaries of suicide bombers.

The new plaintiffs include a Westchester family, a Florida family and three families living in Israel, bringing the list of families represented to 10.

"We've made some detailed allegations and intend to prove that the Arab Bank is used to help finance terrorist groups and that its New York branch is helping to launder the money," said Mark Werbner, the lead counsel for the families, in a statement.

Officials with Arab Bank, based in Amman, Jordan, have denied the allegations, calling them "completely false and totally irresponsible."

Goss is new boss: GOPer to head CIA

President Bush chose Porter Goss, a Republican congressman and onetime spy, yesterday to lead the CIA as the troubled agency struggles to repair its tarnished reputation, confront new terror threats and face the uncertainty of a massive intelligence reorganization.

"He knows the CIA inside and out." Bush said of Goss. the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee who served as a clandestine CIA officer during the 1960s in Central America and Western Europe. "He's the right man to lead this important agency at this critical moment in our nation's history." Senior Democrats complained that Bush had turned to a partisan politician to fill what nominally is a nonpolitical position. Bush also was accused of trying to change the subject on a day when more than 100 House Democrats urged the president to call a special session of Congress to deal with intelligence changes proposed by the independent commission that investigated 9/11.

Committee. Intelligence "Having independent, objective intelligence going to the president and the Congress is fundamental to America's national security." Former CIA chief Stansfield Turner, a supporter of John Kerry's bid for the presidency, called Goss' selection "a terrible appointment" and said it

Scott's mistress takes the stand

President Bush speaks in the Rose Garden, yesterday along with Rep. Porter Goss, R-Fla., left, after he picked Goss, head of the House intelligence committee, to be the new director of the CIA

Scott Peterson's one-time mistress testified yesterday that their first night together included slow dancing to karaoke and a hotel room tryst - but no mention of the pregnant wife who prosecutors say he later murdered.

Amber Frey, the government's star witness, described a relationship that quickly developed from sex to a serious relationship. A single mother, she quickly trusted Peterson with her young daughter.

Frev said Peterson did not wear a wedding ring when they met on Nov. 20, 2002. He poured champagne in his hotel room, putting a strawberry in her glass, and they had sex later that night. On their second date, he carried her 22-month-old daughter as they went hiking. Later that day, he gave the girl a children's book. Then, he cooked seafood lasagna with wine before they had sex again.

"He made the comment that there would be many more corks . . . many more bottles to share," Frey testified.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A Pakistani citizen is in federal custody after being arrested by a police officer who spotted him videotaping the 60story Bank of America headquarters and another skyscraper in Charlotte.

The officer who arrested Kamran Akhtar, 35, said he tried to walk away when officers approached him on July 20 and gave conflicting statements about what he was doing and where he was going.

Videotapes in Akhtar's possession also showed buildings in Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, New Orleans and Austin, as well as transit systems in those cities and a dam in Texas, according to officials.

Akhtar was charged in indictments unsealed yesterday with violating immigration and naturalization laws and making a materially false statement. (AP)

Police: Teen didn't have bomb targets

RALEIGH A North Carolina teenager charged with possessing more than a dozen pipe bombs did not appear to have any targets for the weapons when he was arrested after fleeing a traffic accident, police said yesterday. Jarrett Brown, 17, was arrested Monday after police found six bombs in a car he was driving and more bombs and explosive-making chemicals in his home.

Fewer people killed on U.S. highways

WASHINGTON Fewer people were killed or injured on U.S. highways last year, a decline that regulators said owed much to an increase in seat belt use and a decrease in accidents involving drunken drivers. Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta said yesterday that 42,643 people died in traffic crashes in 2003, down 362 from the previous year. The drop is more striking for the fact that people did more driving in 2003. When measured by the estimated miles driven, the number of deaths per 100 million miles traveled fell to 1.48, the lowest level since record-keeping began in 1966.

Painter charged in truck fire

INDIANAPOLIS A fire in a paint truck that killed two men and scarred 11 others was ignited when one of the men inside flicked a lighter at lacquer spilled during horseplay, a prosecutor said in filing charges yesterday. Tommy McElroy was among 13 painters trapped in the fire July 29, 2003, as they drove along an interstate highway. He faces two counts of reckless homicide and one count of criminal recklessness. If convicted of the most serious charges, McElroy, 27, faces a prison sentence of two to eight years. He was jailed yesterday on $150.000 bond.

ACLU worried over no-fly lists

SAN FRANCISCO The Sept. 11 Commission wants the government to expand the no-fly list airlines now check to keep suspected terrorists off planes, consolidating as many as 12 secret lists maintained by different intelligence agencies. That worries the American Civil Liberties Union, which has already sued the government, saying the airlines' effort to keep terror suspects and other dangerous people off planes ensnares innocent passengers and subjects them to unnecessary searches and delays. Also, the government provides no way for those wrongly named to get themselves removed.

Kids found in fire had throats slashed

COLUMBIA Three children found dead in the ruins of their burned South Carolina home had their throats slashed before one of their parents set the fire, authorities said yesterday. The father had recently been accused of molesting one of the children. York County Sheriff's Capt. Glenn Williams said officials are awaiting test results and plan to investigate further, but added, "We do believe the person that's responsible died in the fire." The bodies of Denia Meza, 14, Denise Meza, 8, and Javro Meza, 5, were found in their charred beds after the fire at their Rock Hill home was extinguished early Monday, said Williams.

American forces call for militants to leave holy city as fighting goes into its sixth day

U.S. forces adopted a new tactic yesterday in their sixth day of battles in this holy Shiite city, sending patrols armed with speakers into the streets, demanding militants loval to a radical cleric drop their arms and leave Naiaf immediately or face death.

The call, broadcast in Arabic from U.S. vehicles, came as U.S. helicopter gunships pummeled a multistoried building 400 yards from the golddomed Imam Ali Shrine with rockets, missiles and 30 mm cannons, marking one of the closest strikes yet to what is one of the holiest sites in Shia Islam.

Najaf Gov. Adnan al-Zarfi has given U.S. forces approval to enter the shrine, a senior U.S. military official said. But such an offensive would almost certainly cause widespread outrage among the nation's Shiite majority and exacerbate the crisis.

Plumes of thick black smoke rose from the building, which serves as a hotel for visitors to the shrine. Witnesses said insurgents were firing from inside it when U.S. forces returned fire

"We've pretty much just been patrolling and flying helicopters all over the place, and when we see something bad, we blow it up," said U.S. Marine Maj. David Holahan, executive officer of the 1st Battalion. 4th Marines Regiment.

Nearby, Bradley fighting vehicles swept through a massive cemetery to flush out small pockets of militants hiding in elaborate concrete tombs. Choppers provided support, firing rockets from above, witnesses said.

Sporadic explosions could be heard elsewhere in the city, and Holahan said militants from al-Sadr's Mahdi Army militia attacked three police stations, two with small arms

Parts of Najaf were deserted. but residents ventured out into the streets, driving small cars nervously along palmlined roads as huge eightwheeled Marine vehicles moved through town on "show of force" patrols.

The fighting, which began last Thursday, has plagued other Shiite communities across Iraq. In Baghdad's Sadr City neighborhood, groups of three to five Mahdi Army militants attacked a district council hall repeatedly with mortars, gunfire and rocket-propelled grenades, clashing with U.S. and Iraqi forces protecting the building, said U.S. Capt. Brian O'Malley of the 1st Brigade Combat Team.

The Health Ministry said the skirmish killed one person and wounded 18. Other clashes in Baghdad killed a second person and wounded 11 others.

Also vesterday, a roadside bomb detonated as a U.S. military vehicle drove on a street in central Baghdad, slightly injuring two soldiers, the military said, and clashes between the Mahdi Army and police in the southern city of Diwaniyah killed three and injured 45. A curfew was imposed on the city, witnesses said (AP)

Libya shells out $35M to victims and families for Berlin disco attack

Libya agreed yesterday to pay $35 million to some victims of a bloody terror bombing at a Berlin disco nearly two decades ago, making another step in Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi's effort to rebuild relations with the West.

The deal, coming after much larger settlements for the bombings of two U.S. and French airliners, does not cover 169 American victims, including two soldiers who died in the blast at the La Belle disco on April 5, 1986. Lawyers are seeking separate compensation for them in U.S. courts

Agreed to by German lawyers and officials of a Libyan foundation run by Gadhafi's son, the settlement deals with 163 non-U.S. citizens, including Germans who were wounded and the family of a Turkish woman killed by the bomb.

"I'm pleased with this fair compromise," German lawyer Ulrich von Jeinsen said after the agreement was sealed. "After 18 years of waiting by the victims, we wanted to come to a deal now."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Adam Ereli welcomed the accord, but he emphasized that the claims of U.S. victims also must be met. "We've made it clear to the Libyans in numerous meetings ... that this is an issue of importance to us, and we are following it closely, and we think it needs to be resolved," Ereli said.

After the deal was announced, Germany said that it hoped to improve relations with Libya and that Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder would visit Libva soon.

Libyan Ambassador Said Abdulaati called the accord "a step forward for the relations of Libya to Germany and the European Union" but said that Libya did not accept guilt for the disco bombing, calling the settlement "a humanitarian gesture." (AP)

A previously unknown Kurdish group claimed responsibility for pre-dawn bomb attacks yesterday against two hotels in Istanbul tourist districts that killed two people and injured 11 others.

An Al Qaeda-linked group also claimed responsibility for the bomb attacks in a statement posted on a Web site, but Turkish authorities cast doubt on that claim, saying Kurdish separatists were suspected.

Bombs rocked the two Istanbul hotels, inexpensive lodging popular among foreign tourists, before dawn yesterday. Two other explosions at a liquefied petroleum gas plant on the outskirts of the city caused damage but no injuries, authorities said.

An Iranian and a Turk were killed in the hotel explosions. The injured included four Spanish tourists, two Dutch tourists, a Ukrainian and two Chinese tourists, Turkish and Spanish authorities said.

The Germany-based

Mezopotamya News Agency which often reports rebel statements, said it received a telephone call from an individual claiming responsibility for the attacks in the name of the Kurdistan Freedom Falcons Organization - a previously unknown Kurdish group.

It said the group carried out the attacks because of recent Turkish military operations against the rebels. No other details were immediately available. The Abu Hafs al-Masri

Brigades, named for an Al Qaeda commander killed in Afghanistan, also claimed responsibility earlier, saying the attacks were the first of a "wave of operations" in European countries and that worse was to come.

"Istanbul is the opening for the bloody war we promised the Europeans," said the statement posted on an Islamic Web site known for publishing the messages of militant groups.

It was not possible to check the authenticity of the claims.

Forensic police examine the site of the Holiday Hotel after a bombing in Istanbul vesterday.

Western experts have questioned the credibility of the Abu Hafs al-Masri Brigades, noting it has previously claimed to be behind events for which it clearly didn't play a role, such as power failures in North America and Britain.

A senior Turkish police official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Turkish authorities had no information to suggest any links to al-Qaeda, and police suspected involvement by Kurdish rebels.

Interior Minister Abdulkadir Aksu said earlier yesterday that Kurdish rebels could be behind the blasts. He added, however, that police were still investigating the possibility that other groups could have been involved. (AP)

STEM CELL RESEARCH

BY MARSHA SHYER

Holding back progress

his week marks the third anniversary of George W. Bush's "compromise" decision to limit federal funding for embryonic stem cell research. Under this compromise, the government would only support research on stem cell lines derived before Aug. 9, 2001. Three years later we are faced with the reality that only a fraction of the stem cell lines Bush envisioned are available for distribution.

Meanwhile, the promise of stem cell research has never been greater. It holds much hope for the development of therapies for diseases like diabetes, multiple sclerosis, Alzheimer's and Parkinson's. Several recent studies underscore the importance of this research as a basis for critically needed therapies for type 1 diabetes. Insulin-producing cells have already been created in stem cells from mice as well as in preliminary studies using stem cell lines from humans.

This hope and promise pushes the stem cell debate beyond party lines. Nancy Reagan and son Ron Reagan publicly support increasing availability of embryonic stem cell lines for use by federally funded researchers.

In May, Nancy Reagan spoke at a Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation event, asserting that stem cell research "may provide our scientists with answers that have so long been beyond our grasps. I just don't see how we can turn our backs on this - there are so many diseases that can be cured, or at least helped.

At the Democratic National Convention, Ron Reagan spoke of a 13-year old girl with type 1 diabetes and the complications she may face, including "blindness, amputation, diabetic coma." He asked the question "what excuse will we offer this voung woman should we fail her now?" In addition, bipartisan groups of more than 200 House members and 58 senators have petitioned Bush to lift the restrictions on stem cell research.

For many people whose children and family members face financially draining, debili-tating chronic illness, the Bush's 'compromise' case for expanding federal has impeded, not research is so obvious that advanced progress it does not necessitate defending. A mix of politics and moral constraint has been imposed on the basis of murky, non-scientific reasoning. This has stymied many researchers, some of whom have found it necessary to pursue their research in labs in other countries.

In fact, Bush's "compromise" has impeded, not advanced progress, although the stated purpose was to create an environment where stem cell research could flourish within a framework of scientific, ethical and practical guidelines.

If stem cell research is to be developed to its fullest, the federal limitations must be lifted, making additional, viable human embryonic stem cells available to scientists. These lines would need to reflect a widely diverse background necessary for research impacting a range of diseases and disorders.

When is a compromise not a compromise? When you look at a child with diabetes injecting herself up to six times a day with insulin, or you watch a parent, ailing with Parkinson's or Alzheimer's, struggling to get through simple daily tasks, "compromise" means a broken heart.

I have heard some pretty silly things in my life, but the Aug. 10 letter "Thank Pakistan" by Jeammie Reed has got to top the list. Is this the same Pakistan that is allowing militants to be trained within its borders and sent to fight American soldiers in Afghanistan? Maybe it's the same Pakistan that allows its nuclear scientists to sell bomb-making technology to rogue regimes. Either way, thanking Pakistan is the last thing I feel like doing.

Fed bumps key rate up quarter of a point The Federal Reserve boost ed a key short-term interest rate by a quarter-point yesterday as the central bank continued its campaign to keep inflation under control.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan and his colleagues on the Federal Open Market Committee, the panel that sets interest rates, boosted the target for the federal funds rate to 1.50%.

The funds rate, the interest that banks charge each year, had been at a 46-year low of 1% just six weeks ago when the Fed raised it to 1.25%, the first increase in four years.

The Fed action this week had been expected as analysts predicted the central bank would continue with its campaign to raise rates even in the face of last Friday's report that showed job creation slowed to a near-standstill last month. Analysts said that if the Fed

He's trumped

Casinos headed for bankruptcy

He made millions in real estate, built a casino empire and conquered television with a reality show that turned "You're fired" into a national catchphrase.

But Donald Trump's glitzy, neon-trimmed casinos have busted. Now, they're headed for bankruptcy court, a $400 million bailout and a new corporate structure in which he surrenders much of his control.

The roulette wheels will keep spinning and the nickel slots will keep eating coins at Trump Taj Mahal, Trump Plaza and Trump Marina, but parent corporation Trump Hotels & Casino Resorts may soon have new bosses calling the shots.

Under a plan announced late Monday, the company will file for a Chapter 11 bankruptcy next month, emerging within a year. The deal is a "prepackaged" bankruptcy, one that has a plan in place at the start to revive a struggling company.

Saddled with double-digit interest rates and unable to keep pace with newer, richer competitors, Trump Hotels will get a bailout from DLJ Merchant Banking Partners an arm of Credit Suisse First Boston - aimed at reducing the company's $1.8 billion in debt.

Trump, whose image shows up on billboards all over Atlantic City, is worth an estimated $2.5 billion, according to Forbes magazine, which earlier this year rated him among the 400 richest Americans.

He would see his stake in his casino company shrink from 56% to 25%, with Credit Suisse owning more than two-thirds of the company.

Trump would remain chairman of the board, but would relinquish both his CEO title and his status as majority stakeholder in Trump Hotels.

"I'm really happy about it. Even though it's a small portion of my net worth, it's an important company to me,' he said yesterday. (AP)

Google's gonna close IPO sign-up

Google Inc. will close the registration process for its IPO auction tomorrow, setting the stage for the online search engine leader's hotly anticipated stock market debut.

The Mountain View-based company posted an online notice vesterday announcing plans to end the registration process at 5 p.m. EDT tomorrow. Google plans to launch an unusual auction to sell 25.7 million shares shortly after closing the registration, the company said vesterday. No further details were provided

Most market observers expect the auction for the initial public offering to be completed next week, clearing the way for Google's shares to begin trading on the Nasdaq Stock Market under the ticker symbol "GOOG '

But Google hasn't spelled out a precise timetable for the auction. In its IPO prospectus, the company stresses it can close the auction "at any time." The prospectus also raises the possibility that the auction could last two or three weeks, noting that bidders will be asked to reconfirm their bids if the process lasts for more than 15 business days.

Once Google is prepared to close the auction, the company must ask the Securities and Exchange Commission to give its final approval of the IPO prospectus. After the SEC signs off on the deal, bidders will have a final opportunity to withdraw their bids. The winning bidders in the auction will be notified by e-mail within 24 hours of SEC approval.

To participate in the auction, bidders need a 16-digit registration number to present to one of the 28 brokerages handling Google's $3.1 billion IPO. The company has been distributing the identification numbers since July 30 when it opened a special site, www.ipo.google.com. (AP)

"I'm a 21-year-old in a G-rated movie," she recently told the AP. This isn't exactly the kind of artistic choices that I want to be making right now, but at the same time, I'm grateful to be able to make them."

Grateful enough to give up playing the dramatic and musical roles Hathaway spent all those years training for as a singer. After all, she turned down a role in a film version of "The Phantom of the Opera" to finish the Princess sequel.

But now she is on to more adult subjects. "Brokeback Mountain" is filming now with Jake Gyllenhaal and Heath Ledger, and Hathaway plays Gyllenhaal's angry and bitter wife. A big difference from the sweet Princess Mia.

Apparently director Ang Lee of "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon fame" liked sweet Mia, because he hired the cute redhead for "Brokeback Mountain" without so much as an

Six Feet Under's Peter Krause played a real, ahem, gentleman to Naomi Watts when the stunning and cunning Aussie let loose a flagrant fragrance on the set of "We Don't Live Here Anymore." "We were shooting a scene in bed and Naomi had put the fart machine in the bed," says Krause, who plays her cheating husband in the film. "At some point I think I started caressing her shoulders and she pressed the button. The sound ensued. I didn't know whether or not to apologize on her behalf, say sorry and blame it on myself." Once Watts revealed her remote controlled electronic fart machine, it wasn't Krause doing the apologizing. (Mina Hochberg)

A scholar and a pimp

Nelly is a pimp! At least, that's what the rapper would have us believe and that's the word he has chosen to brand his image. His Red Bull-like energy drink that hit stores in June is called "Pimp Juice," and now two students will be selected for the P.I.M.P scholars program. That's P.I.M.P. for Positive Intellectual Motivated Person, not a man in a purple fur coat who makes wads of cash with his stable of working girls. The P.I.M.P. scholars programs is sponsored by Pimp Juice" and will award $5,000 two students who have "broadened their horizons through leadership roles in extracurricular activities of all genres."

Advice for applicants: demand the cash upfront. Although Pimp Juice stands to tap into the very lucrative energy drink market, community and religious groups are responding like they did when Ice-T encouraged his fans to shoot police officers.

"We're calling for a national boycott of Nelly's Pimp Juice," said Najee Ali, Executive Director of Project Islamic Hope. "We feel betrayed by Nelly. He's someone who's trying to make money by using and marketing an energy drink that's supposed to be healthy. But there's nothing healthy about using the name pimp. It's a vile name that's really demeaning and insulting to women."

For more information on becoming a P.I.M.P. scholar, email scholarship@letitloose.com. Entries are due in December.

Get ready for a new spice

A new Brit band is about to hit the U.S. charts, and this one is a whole lot more Spice Girls than it is Beatles. Mis-Teeq is an R&P-pop sensation that has been thrilling the London kids and wants to do the same in New York. It's three members range in age from 19-22, and can move as well as they sing. "Scandalous" is the first U.S. single, and a full album is on the way. Their music ranges from almost electronic rave with sirens and whistles to reggae beats and raps. So move over Posh Spice, Alesha Dixon, Su-Elise Nash and Sabrina Washington are about to take it on.

The BoDeans have made a career out of simply being slightly better-thanaverage roots-rockers, a consistency that continues on "Resolution" despite an eight-year recording hiatus. The time away must have done Sam Llanas, Kurt Neumann, et. al., some good; for a band with 20 years on the odometer, "Resolution" feels completely at ease with itself, with nearly all of life's possibilities coursing through the album's 14 tracks. If that sounds simplistically square, well it is. Still, there's something to be said for a band that can take a corned-out cliche and make it emotionally sound. On "Heaven" and "Sleep," the band proves its mettle; anyone can crap a love song, but to make it ache is something special.

AT THE MOVIES Uplifting romance delights

MOVIEREVIEW BY JOHN BLACK DANNY DECKCHAIR RATING ★★★★

Directed by Jeff Balsmever. screenplay by Balsmeyer Starring Rhys Ifans, Miranda Otto, Justine Clarke

"Danny Deckchair" is a fresh, funny and utterly charming romantic comedy about a small-town construction worker who gets a chance to reinvent himself when one of his crazy inventions which consist of a lawn chair and a lot of helium-filled balloons - actually works better than he ever expected.

The film stars Rhys Ifans who first came to fame, at least in America, playing Hugh Grant's quirky roommate Spike in "Notting Hill" - in the role of Danny Morgan, a man who dreams of better things than the day-today routine he's been living for most of his adult life. When the winds of change

blow him, literally, to a town far away from his own, Danny makes the best of his anonymity to become the man he always knew he could be if the people around him didn't already assume he was the man they've always known. The results are very funny and, thanks to some great screen chemistry between the two leading characters, quite romantic. Ifans has built a respectable career out of playing quirky sidekicks in films like "The Replacements," "Little Replacements," "Little Nicky" and "Formula 51." And although he starts out playing just another variation of the same sort of guy in

"Danny Deckchair" - complete with scraggly beard and long stringy hair - the plot gives him a chance to clean up his act and prove that he can carry a film on his own.

His co-star, Miranda Otto - who shot to global fame playing Eowyn in the "Lord of the Rings" movies — proves there's another side to her, too. She plays Glenda, a timid traffic cop whose backyard Danny crash-lands in. Watching her character come out of her shell is one of the highlights of the film, particularly in the way she avoids all the clichés such a role could have been propped up with.

The rest of the cast does a great job supporting Ifans and Otto as they discover who they are and how those people fit together, and writer/director Jeff Balsmeyer does a fantastic job of keeping it rooted in enough reality to make even the more fantastic aspects of the story feel true. The end result is a joyful film that will stay with you long after you leave the theater.

AT THE MOVIES Gimmicky 'Diaries' is a royal mess

MOVIEREVIEW

BY JOHN BLACK THE PRINCESS DIARIES 2: ROYAL ENGAGEMENT RATING

Directed by Garry Marshall, screenplay by Meg Cabot and Gina Wendkos Starring Julie Andrews, Anne Hathaway, Hector Elizondo, Heather Matarazzo

"The Princess Diaries 2: Royal Engagement" is an annoying movie that, in a summer marked by great sequels ("Spider-Man 2," "The Bourne Supremacy"), stands out as a shining example of just how foul a follow-up to a hit can be.

For those who missed the original film when it was released in 2001, "The Princess Diaries" told the tale of Mia Thermopolis, a San Francisco teen who, unbeknownst to herself, was the crown princess of the tiny European country of Genovia.

Now, five years later, Princess Mia (Anne Hathaway) finally arrives at her new country to be crowned queen, only to find out there is an ancient law in Genovia that declares a princess can only be a queen if she is married.

With a script that plays like it wasn't so much written as copied out of a Cliff Notes cheat sheet for fairy tales, "Princess Diaries

2" offers its audience virtually nothing that wasn't milked to death for cheap laughs and even cheaper sentiment in the first movie. In fact, there are scenes in this sequel, such as a dance sequence between the Queen of Genovia (Julie Andrews) and her love-sick head of security, Joe (Hector Elizondo), which feel like they were cut and pasted directly from the first film.

Director Garry Marshall, whose motto seems to be "I've never met a cliché I wouldn't use," seems to know he's got nothing in terms of plot with this one, so the fills the film with lots of inappropriate sight gags, like a poodle chasing a cat and a footman dancing in the hallway. The gags are almost distracting enough to keep the audience from being bored while waiting nearly two hours for this silly bit of fluff to reach its predictable conclusion. Almost.

More than a garnish

BY BUSS PARSONS The L.A. Times

Round and red and crisp, they're casually tossed on the plate at your favorite taco stand or jumbled in a jar at the salad bar, full of color and crunch but ultimately signifying nothing. But hold on there's more to the radish than you might think.

The simplest way to prove it is to set out a chilled bouquet of them on a plate with a tub of softened butter and some coarse salt. Smear a radish in the butter and then dip it in the salt. Take a bite.

Quarter radishes lengthwise and sprinkle them with lemon juice and salt for another quick nibble. Slice them thin and toss the little red-rimmed moons with butter lettuce; notice how the crisp spice plays against the tender greens. Use a toothpick to spear together a radish half and a bite of silky smoked salmon.

You can even eat the leaves. They have the texture of watercress and a bit of its flavor, but with that great mustardy radish bite as well. If you're roasting or grilling meat, serve it with a simple salad of radishes quartered lengthwise with their tops attached and dress it with vegetable oil, red wine vinegar and a couple tablespoons of the carving juices.

Although you can find radishes in the market all year round, this is really the season to get them at their best.

While our radish selection most of the year is limited to the familiar round red varieties ("Cherry Belle," or one of its cousins), in the spring and early summer we get to

The long, tapering "French Breakfast" has a mild bite and a red and white color scheme that brings to mind strawberries dipped in cream. Another radish that pops up in the summer is the pure white, very thin "White Icicle," which is nearly sweet.

You might also find the last of the winter varieties, like the black radish, the Central European favorite with a powerful bite, and the Asian radishes, such as the giant daikon and the smaller "shinrimei" (often called watermelon radish in the West due to its pale red heart).

RECIPE RADISH AND GOAT CHEESE CANAPES

Serves 4 Ingredients

- 2 bunches radishes
- · 9 ounces fresh goat cheese
- 1 baguette loaf
- coarse salt

rim the tops from the radishes and wash and pat dry. Chop some of the brightest and freshest tops to make two-thirds cup.

Pulse the chopped tops with the goat cheese in a small food processor until nearly smooth.

Thinly slice the radishes. Slice the baguette thin and lightly toast.

Spread two to three teaspoons of the goat cheese mixture on each slice.

Top each slice with three or four radish slices and sprinkle with coarse salt. Serve on a platter lined with remaining radish tops.

· Look for radishes that are the size of a nickel and no bigger than a guarter. · Braise, roast or glaze radishes in butter to have them lose some of their bite.

• Radishes are fast growers that prefer the cooler weather (less than 70°). If they grow too fast they tend to crack or become hollow, which makes for an undesirable radish.

RADISHFACTS

 Radishes and turnips are members of the same family: brassicas, or mustardy vegetables (along with arugula and broccoli).

· The radish's flavor comes from the chemical isothiocyanate, which can make a nice organic pesticide

MEAT AND POULTRY

Porterhouse steak Porterhouse steak, also called T-bone, is the best of both worlds. This superior cut is part tenderloin or filet and part shell, giving you both a tender and flavorful steak. Buy a one-and-a-half inch thick steak; one porterhouse steak can generously serve two people. Coat a grill pan with olive oil over high heat; place the steak in the pan and cook for just five minutes on each side for medium rare. When done to your liking, crack a little freshly ground black pepper on top and allow to rest for just a few minutes before serving.

Heirloom tomato

Heirloom tomatoes' heritage can be traced backed to the early settlers, who brought this variety to America from Europe. And because they're so unique, so to are their color, shape and taste. No two look alike. Two examples are Brandywine and Zebra. They're ideal for grilling or as the main attraction in an heirloom salad.

FRUIT

Tree ripe stone fruits Season: Mid June-Sept

Shipped from: California The "stone" in a stone fruit actually refers to the pit in tree fruits such as peaches and nectarines. But don't let the stone throw you. Our extra large (jumbo) tree-ripe stone fruits are extra-flavorful, sweet and juicy because they're left on the tree longer. Perfect for out-of-hand enjoyment, or slice and add to your favorite cottage cheese.

Serve Greek whites for the games

BY ANTHONY GIGLIO Special to amNewYork

The wines of Greece have made amazing strides in quality, especially in the last decade, and are finally getting the international recognition and respect they deserve. Of course, this sounds ridiculous if you consider that Greece has been making wine for, oh, 3,000 years. Despite the fact that in antiquity Greek traders and colonists pollinated the entire Mediterranean with their wine culture, many wine drinkers today dismiss Greek wine as little more than thin, bitter reds or pinescented white retsinas.

Discovering them, however, is a bit of a challenge. Greece's abundance of native grapes is dizzying, and adding to the confusion is the use of international grapes like chardonnay and cabernet sauvignon. Look for these three regions on labels as guides to quality: Macedonia, in northernmost Greece, which produces a well-known wine called

Naoussa, a spicy, fruity, medium-bodied red; the Peleponnese, a peninsula in the south and home to many noteworthy wines, including dry whites with names like Patras and Mantinia and soft, fruity reds such as Nemea, along with sweet dessert wines of both colors, such as the white Muscat de Patras and the red Mavrodaphne de Patras; and Crete, the largest of the Greek isles, which produces both whites and reds, some with varietal names on the label, some simply with the appellation "Crete."

This week we'll cover the whites; next week the reds. White grapes to know include assyrtiko (ahs SEER tee koh), used to make the aforementioned Santorini; rhoditis, used to make Patras white; and savatiano, a grape grown throughout the country. Retsina, by the way, is a traditional wine made with Savatiano to which pine resin is added, giving it a woody flavor

Shrimp and radishes RECIPE

SHRIMP CEVICHE WITH RADISHES

Serves: 8 to 10 Ingredients:

· 1 pound large raw shrimp, peeled and deveined

- ¹/₃ cup chopped green onions
- 1 teaspoon salt

• ¾ cup freshly squeezed lime juice (about five to seven limes

- · 2 bunches radishes, tops removed, roots trimmed
- 2 ears corn
- 1 avocado, ripe but still firm
- 12 mint leaves

ut the shrimp into one-inch pieces and combine it in a bowl with the onions, salt and lime juice. Cover tightly and refrigerate until the shrimp is firm and white, about three hours.

Cut the radishes into halfinch wedges and add to the ceviche. Cut the corn kernels from the cob and add to the ceviche. Peel and pit the avocado, dice the flesh and add it. to the ceviche. Tear the mint leaves into quarters and gently stir everything together.

Serve in juice or martini glasses or in a bowl with tortilla chips. (L.A. Times)

Serve your shrimp ceviche with radishes in an elegant martini glass for a quick and easy way to dress up your dish.

RECIPE

TART SHELLS

Fill these up with creme and fruit for a delicious dessert Serves: 32 Ingredients:

- 6 tablespoons butter
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup flour

• 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons cake flour

Cream the butter and sugar. Add the egg and vanilla and mix. Sift the flours together. Add the flours to the butter mixture and mix. Form the dough into a flat disk and wrap in plastic. Let it rest in the refrigerator for 20 minutes.

Roll the dough out on a lightly floured surface to oneeighth-inch thick. Using a 2 ¼-inch round cookie cutter, cut circles. Press the dough circles into mini muffin tins to form tart shells. Chill. Fill with cream or custard and berries to serve (L.A. Times)

EXOTICEDIBLES

What they are:

Figs have a plump teardrop shape, a satiny pulp punctuated by the jolt of hundreds of tiny seeds and a honeyed sweetness.

How to pick and to store:

Steal a quick squeeze — a reliable indicator of readiness. It shouldn't be too mushy or too hard.

How to prepare: It seems obvious what to do with the perfect ones. (Eat them unadulterated or spoon them up with yogurt and honey.) Classic pairings include assertive flavors and creamy textures: Fig and arugula salad with balsamic vinegar and figs wrapped in paper-thin slices of cured prosciutto or serrano ham that crisp and sizzle when grilled or broiled briefly. Figs pair exceedingly well with chocolate as well. (Benee Schettler/The Washington Post)

Pam actually created this for the British recording artist Jamie Cullen. It is named after the Radiohead song of which Jamie Cullen does a cover on his latest album Twentysomething, just released in the US in May. This is aptly named since the drink is dry and is bound to leave you feeling high because of its alcohol content.

Lower cholesterol without drugs?

BY DEAN ORNISH The Washington Post

Reducing cholesterol levels saves lives. A recent report by a panel of experts from the American Heart Association and the government's National Cholesterol Education Program recommended more aggressive treatment of people with elevated cholesterol levels. I agree.

The diagnosis is right, but the prescription is incom-Millions plete. more Americans will be prescribed cholesterol-lowering drugs that many, perhaps most, could have avoided by making bigger changes in diet and lifestyle than this panel recommended. Since about $20 billion was spent on these drugs in the U.S. last year (almost $10 billion on Lipitor alone), a lot is at stake.

Statin drugs such as Lipitor are effective ways of lowering cholesterol levels. I prescribe them for patients when indicated.

Several large-scale trials have demonstrated that these drugs can reduce heart attacks and premature death and that they may have additional benefits. Clearly, though, it would be better to accomplish the same goals by changing diet and lifestyle, since all drugs have costs and side effects, both known and unknown.

As tens of millions of people begin taking these medications for decades, more longterm side effects are likely to become apparent; the statin drug Baycol was taken off the market in 2001 because of toxic side effects. In contrast, it costs nothing additional to eat a healthful diet, walk, meditate and quit smoking, and the only side effects of these behaviors are beneficial.

The panel recommended diet and lifestyle changes as a first step for some people. But the diet it recommended has little effect on cholesterol levels, because it doesn't go far enough; for most people, cholesterol levels decrease only 5%. The authors advised that adults with LDL-cholesterol levels above 100 mg/dL (which includes most adults in the United States) or even above 70 mg/dL (high-risk patients) be treated with drugs right away before finding out if diet and lifestyle changes are sufficient.

The writer is clinical professor of medicine at the University of California, San Francisco and president of the nonprofit Preventive Medicine Research Institute.

oo-boos all better

BY CAROLE GOLDBERG The Hartford Courant

It used to be so simple. When you fell down, Mom or Dad came to the rescue, washed off your wound and applied hydrogen peroxide or mercurochrome. Then, depending on the extent of your boo-boo, you got a wide bandage, a skinny little one or a dot.

But today's bandage choices go far beyond just size and shape. The consumer market for adhesive bandages has exploded, driven by technological advances in hospitals.

Lisa Corbett, a nurse at the Center for Wound Healing and Hyperbaric Medicine at Hartford Hospital in Connecticut, says the improved treatment of chronic non-healing wounds, those that persist longer than 30 days, has spun off products now available to the public. As a result, store shelves are jampacked with products: liguid and spray-on bandages, ionized-silver bandages. waterproof bandages, moistenvironment-promoting bandages and easy-to-remove bandages. Then there are the anti-itch, anti-bleeding and anti-bacterial bandages. Not mention to bandages shaped to fit finor

knuckles or medicated to minimize scars or cushioned to heal blisters. And don't forget the eve-catching bandages for kids, decorated with cartoon characters or tattoo designs, and clear ones that appeal to adults because they don't catch the eve.

"At first, it seems like a challenge to navigate" among all these choices, says Todd Andrews, a spokesman for CVS Corp. "But it's a real benefit to consumers "

As hospital stays grow shorter, he notes, postoperative wound care is increasingly being managed at home. "Our customers have told us, through studies, that they want these products,' Andrews says.

Michael Sweeney, spokesman for 3M's Nexcare line, says liquid-bandage products among the are newest to catch the interest of consumers. Although they may be more expensive per application, he says, they last longer, which helps bring their cost closer to that of strip bandages. Further refinements will make such innovations more convenient and affordable, Sweeney says.

Fred Tewell, product director for Johnson & Johnson's Band-Aid Brand Adhesive Bandages, says older consumers, a growing group, are buying bandages that are gentle to the skin, such as the liquid type or Band-Aid's Hurt-Free line.

We've come a long way from the birth of the first Band-Aids, which company lore says were invented in 1920 by Earle Dickson, a cotton buyer for Johnson & Johnson.

By now, more than 100 billion Band-Aids have been made, and the company's trademarked name has become the shorthand term for any adhesive bandage.

According to a report posted on MarketResearch.com, 60% to 70% of adhesive bandages in the United States are used on children, and those with licensed images account for 15% to 20% of the market.

A family meal, whether it's loaded with brussels sprouts or carrots, might provide more than just nutrition. It might also improve teenagers' emotional health.

"The family mealtime could provide kind of an informal check-in time, a little reminder that you're part of a group of people that care about you," said Marla Eisenberg, an epidemiologist these problems.

Family meals appeared to have a more positive effect on girls than boys. Girls who said they ate more than seven meals a week with their families were almost half as likely to report attempting suicide as girls who said they never sat down to eat with their families. Boys who ate more family meals did not have a significantly different risk of suicide than those who ate

Previous studies have shown that family meals were associated with how much children felt their parents cared about them. Children who feel close to their parents have a reduced risk of drug use, emotional problems, violence and sexual activity.

In the study, conducted in 1998 and 1999, researchers at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis surveyed 4,746 11- to 18-year-olds in the Twin Cities about their families' eating habits, their grades, drug use and mental health. Meals didn't have to be in the evening nor be home-cooked to qualify as family meal.

Trapeze New York: The only way to fly

BY MARY MCGUIRE-WIEN Special to amNewYork

New Yorkers are taking fitness out of the gym and finding fantastic new challenges outdoors. On Hudson River Drive and Vestry Street, there is an incredible, only-in-New York way to take the strength and agility gained from pumping iron or yoga class out to play. Warning: You will need to be in reasonably good shape to begin with!

When I first walked into Trapeze School New York I saw a low practice swing, which naturally I envisioned as the place for my first lesson. But when I heard the instructions, my jaw dropped and my heart quickened. Climb 23 feet high, grab a trapeze and swing, then loop knees over the bar, let go and swing upside down, then grab the bar with your hands and let go, tumbling down to the net below. The dumbfound-the safety rope and handed me the trapeze. Down below, the no-nonsense Paul shouted commands for timing while pulling me around with the safety rope. On another trapeze, the upside-down Jason waited to catch those of us who qualified for this experience. Terrified on my first try, I gained confidence with each successive attempt. Even so, I didn't achieve the precision required for the coveted catch. In the meantime my arms, shoulders and whole body felt completely toned and alive. Not to mention my soaring spirit. This is the only way to fly.

Learning to forgive others — even without an apology from the offender — can improve your mental, emotional and physical health, studies have shown

Using the 'f' word will help you heal

BY GARRET CONDON The Hartford Courant

Forgiveness isn't always easy, but it's simple, right?

Not really, as it turns out. A number of psychotherapists and academic psychologists have championed the healing power of forgiveness. But the trend also has bred a group of unrepentant critics.

On one side is the "forgiveness movement," a twodecade effort to study the health effects of forgiving. Proponents of therapeutic forgiveness, especially psychologist Robert D. Enright of the University of Wisconsin, have proposed that injured parties can learn to forgive their offenders - with or without an apology from them. Studies show that forgiving those who trespass against us can reduce stress-promoting anger and improve mental, emotional and physical health. On the other side are critics of the movement, such as leffrie G. Murphy, a professor of law, philosophy and religious studies at Arizona State University. Murphy and other contrarians aren't against forgiveness itself, but against a theory of forgiveness that they see as, well, unforgiving. Murphy, the author of last Even: year's "Getting Forgiveness and Its Limits," has no doubt that, for some people, forgiveness brings healing and allows them to move on.

"But sometimes," he said 'getting mad and getting even brings closure."

One Connecticut psychotherapist, who asked that her name not be used, found herself consumed by anger and violent revenge fantasies when she discovered that her husband had been having sex with prostitutes - sometimes in the couple's home while she was away with the children. She was not only betraved but infected with a sexually transmitted disease.

"I thought, 'I don't want to live with this anger," she said. Following the writings of Enright, other psychotherapists, Buddhist teachers and one-on-one therapy - she was able to forgive her husband and let go of much of her anger.

As a therapist, she said, she better understands the power of forgiveness and the importance of not trying to push patients into forgiving. As a result of her own experience, she said, "I think I have more tolerance for people to be angry for a very long time."

That's why, all fashion reasons aside, amNewYork talked to Dr. Brian G. Brazzo, MD, of Cornell Medical University Center about the real reasons why it's cool to wear sunglasses.

AMNY What are UV rays?

BRAZZO UV, or ultraviolet rays, are a type of energy that is emitted by the sun.

AMNY Exactly how do they affect the eyes?

BRAZZO It has been suggested by researchers that high doses of UV light can cause problems with the eye, including macular degeneration, one of the leading causes of blindness in the U.S.

AMNY Do UV rays become harmful to the eye as you age or do they affect you from birth?

BRAZZO Most of the damage caused by UV light is caused early in life and tends to be the cumulative effect of exposure to UV light over many years. It is good from an early age to protect your eyes with sunglasses with UV filters and wear a hat with a brim.

AMNY When buying sunglasses, is there a difference in quality between glasses from your local drugstore and those from a specialty store?

BRAZZO When you buy a high quality lens, you know that it has the UV filters in it. Most sunglasses bought at department or drugstores, if they have the filter stamp on them, are reliable, but it's tough to say for sunglasses sold on the street, even if they may have the stamp on them. And contact lenses, as far as I know, do not provide UV protection.

With the Republican National Convention coming to the city, Time's Up! is planning on hosting several events to highlight the importance of finding non-polluting methods of transportation and spotlighting the need for elected officials to work on legislation that promotes the well-being of the environment.

Past events that the group have participated in include the Critical Mass bike tour that meets up at the end of each month en masse, as it were, for a ride across the city. The Critical Mass tours have become a huge underground phenomenon in the city.

KEEP THE BODY TONE

This is a popular exercise to target the muscles in your upper body and shoulders. It adds shape and firmness to your back muscles and develops strength that is especially valuable to swimmers or rock climbers who need powerful upper bodies.

1 Lie on a sturdy bench or position your head and shoulders on top of a Bosu trainer. Bend your knees with your feet hip-width apart and flat on the floor. Holding a dumbbell in each hand, bend your elbows with the dumbbells close together and just above your chest. Pull your abdominals and keep your back straight.

2 Keeping your elbows in the bent position, inhale and move the dumbbells behind your head. On an exhale, squeeze the muscles in the outer sides of your back as you slowly bring the dumbbells back over your upper chest. Pause for a moment and repeat 12 times. Rest for 20 seconds and repeat for a total of three sets. (LA. Times)

- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- My toes aren't straight-they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it's worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

SPORTS CHATTER Divorce for Fox

Hick Fox, traded last week by the Los Angeles Lakers to the Boston Cettics, filed for divorce yesterday from singer-actress Vanessa Williams. The two, above, have been married for five years and have a 4-year-old daughter. Williams, who won the Miss America pageant in 1984, has three children from her first marriage, and Fox has a son from a previous relationship. The two had been separated.

Pepe's pitch

Maria Pepe, whose lawsuit in the early 1970s forced Little League to allow girls to play baseball, will throw out the opening pitch of the Little League World Series. Pepe, of Hoboken, N.J., was 12 when she earned a spot on a team in the Hoboken Little League, But league officials forced the team to take her off the roster, prompting a lawsuit by Pepe's family and the National Organization of Women. They won the lawsuit in 1974, but by then Pepe was too old for Little League. (AP)

Houston's Jeff Kent was safe at home on this play last night, but the Mets snapped a three-game losing streak with a 7-3 win over the Astros. David Wright homered, and Jose Reyes hit a two-run triple Mike Piazza and Kaz Matsui sat out with injuries for the third straight game.

Crash costs ace 2 teeth

Mets pitcher Tom Glavine lost his two front upper teeth in an automobile accident yesterday while going from LaGuardia Airport to nearby Shea Stadium in a taxi cab.

Glavine, who is 8-10 with a 2.92 earned run average, also got stitches for a cut lower lip. He was to be released from a hospital last night and miss his scheduled start tonight against Houston. Matt Ginter will take his place.

The accident occurred at 2:15 p.m. as Glavine headed to the ballpark for New York's game against the Astros. The left-hander had spent Monday's off day with his family in Atlanta, where he used to play.

Glavine was leaving La-Guardia in a taxi that collided with a sport utility vehicle on the overpass of the Grand Central Parkway as he left the airport grounds, the Mets said.

Police responded to the crash, and the Emergency Medical Service took Glavine by ambulance to a hospital in Manhattan.

Glavine, who was conscious, was treated by Mets oral surgeon Dr. Robert Glickman. He was resting comfortably and was to go straight to his home in Connecticut, the Mets said.

Growing up in Massachusetts, Glavine was a two-sport prep star and was picked by the NHL's Los Angeles Kings in the fourth round of the 1984 draft. Once asked why he picked baseball over hockey, he joked, "I had all my own teeth and I wanted to keep it that way." (AP)

Giambi cleared to play

A smiling and upbeat Jason Giambi arrived yesterday at the Yankees' spring training complex to start working himself back into playing shape after being diagnosed with a benign tumor.

"Definitely, I'm feeling better," Giambi said when departing the complex.

Wearing sweat pants and a white T-shirt, Giambi said he would talk about his situation Wednesday afternoon at a news conference.

"Jason Giambi has been cleared to resume baseball activities immediately," Yankees physician Dr. Stuart Hershon said after consulting with doctors at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

The first baseman, who has felt weak for most of the season, has not played since July 23. The Yankees at first diagnosed him with an intestinal parasite, then said July 30 that he had a benign tumor, without disclosing where it was located.

Giambi had difficulty keeping food down for much of June and July. Giambi struggled before going on the disabled list, batting just .221. (AP)

Pink eye benches Yankees' Vazquez

Yankees pitcher Javier Vazquez will miss his scheduled start tonight against the Texas Rangers because of pink eye. The right-hander has been bothered by pink eye for nearly a week. He remained in New York yesterday and could rejoin the team for its series next week in Minnesota.Right-hander Tanyon Sturtze will start in Vazquez's place.

Mets coach suspended, then reinstated

Mets pitching coach Rick Peterson was suspended for last night's game against Houston for violating baseball's slow pace policy, then was reinstated before the penalty took effect. "The whole thing has been rescinded," said Bob Watson, vice president of on-field operations in the commissioner's office. Earlier in the day, Peterson was suspended for one game and fined an undisclosed amount for a run-in with plate umpire Tony Randazzo last Wednesday at Montreal. Peterson had gone to the mound to talk to reliever Tyler Yates after a walk, but argued when Randazzo told him to hurry up.

Royals demote top rookie of 2003

The Kansas City Royals sent struggling AL Rookie of the Year Angel Berroa to Double-A Wichita yesterday, Berroa, who signed an $11 million, four-year contract in May, was batting just .249 with five homers and 30 RBIs. Last year, the shortstop hit. .287 with 17 homers and 73 RBIs in his first full season on a big league roster.

Sosa passes Jackson on career HR list

Chicago Cubs star Sammy Sosa hit his 564th homer last night and moved past Reggie Jackson into sole possession of eighth place on the career list. Sosa, in an 0-for-15 slump, connected for a solo shot in the second inning off San Diego's Adam Eaton. Harmon Killebrew is seventh with 573.

Today marks 10 years since strike

Ten years ago today, baseball players packed up the bats and balls and went home for the winter, wiping out the World Series and alienating millions. "I hope we've all learned our lesson," commissioner Bud Selig said recently. (AP)

Tisch is fighting tumor

Giants co-owner Robert Tisch has been diagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor.

New coach Tom Coughlin informed the team of Tisch's illness after the morning practice, the Giants said.

"Very few of us in the organization knew there was any issue with Mr. Tisch," Coughlin said. "We are very, very upset about the news. The team is upset. Mr. Tisch is a wonderful guy."

Neither the Giants nor Howard Rubenstein, a Tisch family spokesman, would give specifics about the tumor.

Tisch bought half of the team in 1991 from Wellington Mara's nephew, Tim Mara. The 78-year-old is the chairman of Loews Corp. He served as postmaster general of the U.S. from 1986-88.

Since buying a share in the NFL team, Tisch has attended most games. He also has made almost weekly visits to Giants Stadium to watch practice and talk to players.

"It's a jolt," Pro Bowl defen-sive end Michael Strahan said. "He's a great man. I remember some of the things we've gone through since I've been here and how good he's always been to me. I'm definitely praying for him." (AP)

MVP McNair maintains low profile

Steve McNair is one win away from matching Warren Moon's total for career wins (70) with the Titans' franchise.

Winning an MVP award usually translates into commercials, magazine covers and appearances on the front of cereal boxes. Not for Tennessee guarterback Steve McNair.

McNair has had offers since sharing the NFL's 2003 prize with Peyton Manning. It's just that he prefers staying out of the spotlight and enjoying the quiet life with his fam-ily on his 643-acre Mississippi ranch when he's not on a football field trying to improve.

McNair led the NFL with a 100.4 passer rating and was the AFC's Pro Bowl starter. He threw for 3,215 yards with a career-high 24 touchdowns and career-low seven interceptions in just 14 games.

But he knows defenses will be looking to shut him down this season.

McNair, 31, is healed from February surgery to remove a bone spur from his left ankle. The injury caused him to miss two games last season and left him hobbling at the end of a playoff loss at New England.

A bigger concern is the loss of Frank Wycheck and Eddie George, his longtime tight end and running back. With those two gone, McNair and left tackle Brad Hopkins are the only Titans who played in Houston as Oilers. (AP)

brows vesterday when he showed up at the Giants' morning workout with a brace on his left knee. "We asked him in the locker room if he was all right," guarterback Kurt Warner said. 'He said he had worn it in the past and it was something that he felt comfortable with." Manning, who's competing with Warner to be the team's starting quarterback, said he wears the brace in games. He said he wore it vesterday because it was a new one and he wanted to get used to it. Manning started wearing a brace in his junior year at Mississippi. The Giants, coming off a losing season, are counting on Manning, the top pick in the 2004 draft, to turn around the team's fortunes (AP)

Brown reunites with former coach

Tim Brown signed yesterday with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, a move that reunites the former Oakland receiver with ex-Raiders coach Jon Gruden and general manager Bruce Allen. The 38-year-old, nine-time Pro Bowl receiver will be counted on to bolster a receiving corps that is in desperate need of experienced help because of injuries and Keenan McCardell's holdout. Brown was released last week after 16 seasons with the Raiders, who told him that he was no better than the fourth or fifth best receiver in a group that included starters Jerry Rice and Jerry Porter. With Tampa Bay, Brown could wind up being a starter with McCardell demanding a raise after a Pro Bowl season and Joe Jurevicius out indefinitely after undergoing back surgery. (AP)

Desperate Miami turns to Freeman

Receiver Antonio Freeman worked out for the Miami Dolphins vesterday, a day after David Boston had seasonending knee surgery. A former Pro Bowler and once Brett Favre's No. 1 target in Green Bay, Freeman, 32, caught just 14 passes for 141 yards in 15 games with the Packers last season. He could be more help to the Dolphins, who have little experience opposite Chris Chambers at the receiver position. But the Dolphins were still considering whether to sign Freeman, who has spent his entire career in the West Coast offense, which the Dolphins don't use. Boston tore a tendon in his left knee Friday, moving Derrius Thompson back into a starting role. Thompson was a disappointment in his first season with the Dolphins. (AP)

Nylander signs with Rangers gral part of our special teams play."

Free agent forward Michael Nylander signed a three-year deal with the Rangers yesterday worth $8.9 million.

Nylander will earn $2.9 million next season, and $3 million in each of the next two years of the deal that also includes an option for the 2007-08 season.

With a lockout that threatens next season looming, the Rangers — the NHL's biggest spenders - had been quiet since the free-agent shopping season began July 1. But general manager Glen Sather decided to bring in the 31-year-old center, who has averaged almost a point per game during his 11 seasons.

"Michael is a highly skilled, versatile player who we feel will play a significant role on our team, Sather said. "He is a very intelligent player who will be an inte-

Tense day ends with U.S. victory

TURKEY

By the time U.S. Olympic basketball players finished an 80-68 victory over Turkey in front of a jeering and whistling crowd yesterday, they pronounced themselves ready for Athens - but still jittery from the events of an anxious day.

The Americans' final Olympic tuneup was similar to many others during an upand-down tour through Europe. They were unable to dominate an opponent that figured to be vastly overmatched, but they got the job done in the end.

What made this day different was a major off-the-court event that tested their focus.

The team learned early in the morning that bombs had exploded at two tourist hotels and a fuel depot a few miles from their hotel, but team and U.S. government officials reassured them it would be safe to go ahead with the game.

After failing to shake Turkey for three quarters, the U.S. team hit its stride in the fourth - but not before the crowd gave them an earful. The play that turned the fans against them came when LeBron James swiped at the ball and hit Turkey guard Ibrahim Kutluay in the eye. Kutluay, who scored 26 points, lay writhing on the floor before walking off. He eventually returned.

Another Turkish player went down moments later, and the whistles and shrieks from the crowd reached earsplitting levels whenever the U.S. had the ball thereafter. (AP)

Accuser files civil lawsuit against Kobe

The 20-year-old woman accusing Kobe Bryant of rape filed a federal civil lawsuit against the NBA star vesterday, seeking unspecified damages for pain, suffering and "public scorn, hatred and ridicule" she has suffered as a result of the alleged attack.

The attorneys asked for a jury trial and compensatory damages of at least $75,000, with punitive damages to be determined later.

The woman was identified only as Jane Doe. A prosecution spokeswoman said the civil lawsuit won't affect the criminal trial. (AP)

Medals get chic & Greek

The gold, silver and bronze medals have a new look for the Athens Olympics — a redesign that's unique, Greek and even a little chic.

For the facelift, the first for the Summer Games in 76 years, organizers asked artists to submit proposals that included two distinctly Greek elements: a depiction of Nike, the goddess of victory, and the Panathinaikos, the Athens stadium where the first modern Olympics were held in 1896.

Ever since the 1928 Olympics, Nike had been shown on the medals, seated on a chariot holding a wreath and an ear of corn, symbolically honoring winning athletes. Next to the goddess was usually a stadium that looked like a Roman amphitheater. (AP)

Maritza Correia, above, is the first black woman to swim for the U.S. Olympic team. In 2000, Anthony Ervin, whose mother is white, became the first black male swimmer to represent the U.S. He shared the gold medal in the 50-meter freestyle with Gary Hall Jr. before retiring earlier this year.

As rough stereotypes go, America's greatest swimmers were born privileged white children who grew up on cul-de-sacs sandwiched between California and Florida, Maritza Correia did grow up in Florida, "but that's about it as far as the regular path goes," she said.

"Let's see," she continued. "I was born in Puerto Rico and my parents are Guyanese. I was diagnosed with scoliosis at 6 years old and my doctor said I should take up the sport for my back problems. And then I just started getting serious about it."

Sleek and powerful in the water, "Ritz," 22, has already broken freestyle sprint records held by Olympians Amy Van Dyken and Jenny Thompson.

And though six world records were set at last month's U.S. Olympic trials in Long Beach, Calif., Correia made another bit of history: She became the first black woman to swim for the U.S., qualifying for the 400-meter freestyle relay, a year after winning a gold medal for the U.S. in the same event at the 2003 world championships.

Maritza began swimming as a child after doctors told her it would help her avoid surgery to repair a 15-degree curvature of her spine. Growing up in Tampa, Maritza's classmates kept encouraging her to join them socially after school. She always ended up at the pool.

"I got a lot of, 'Ohmigosh, you gotta go to swim practice again?" Correia said. "But I just kept swimming. It was important to me."

She won a scholarship to the University of Georgia, where she set American records in the sprint freestyles and won multiple NCAA championships.

OLYMPIC BRIEFS

Rockefeller. oldest U.S. medalist, dies

James Stillman Rockefeller, the oldest known U.S. Olympic medal winner and the former head of the bank that became Citigroup, died in New Haven yesterday, his family said. Rockefeller, who was 102, had lived in Greenwich Rockefeller captained an eight-man crew with coxswain from the Yale University rowing team to win gold at the Paris Olympics. Another member of the crew was Dr. Benjamin Spock, the renowned pediatrician. Rockefeller was a grandson of William Rockefeller, who founded Standard Oil with his brother. John D. Rockefeller.

Protesters honor 13 dead workers

Anti-Olympic protesters gathered in central Athens yesterday to hold an open-air memorial service for 13 workers killed during round-the-clock construction of venues for the Olympics. About 500 demonstrators stood in silence as the names of the workers were read out and olive wreaths placed on 13 crosses erected outside Greece's parliament three days before the games' start.

Women's soccer team plays today

Women's soccer will kick-start Olympic festivities today, two days ahead of everything else. The U.S. opens against Greece today on the island of Crete, one of eight games two days before the opening ceremony for a sport that has to start early to squeeze everything in

Capriati pulls out, Raymond steps in

Jennifer Capriati was forced to pull out of the Athens Games with a hamstring injury and was replaced by Lisa Raymond, a team spokesman said yesterday. Capriati won a gold medal at the 1992 Barcelona Games but she missed the 1996 and 2000 Olympics. She told coach Zina Garrison on Sunday she couldn't play in the Olympics because of the injury which she sustained in July Raymond, who was to play doubles with Martina Navratilova, was picked for the singles spot vacated.

Javelin thrower ianores torn ACL

Breaux Greer would never let a little thing like a torn knee ligament keep him out of the Athens Olympics especially since he has a decent chance to become the first U.S. javelin thrower in more than a halfcentury to win a gold medal. Greer tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee, the one he plants hard to the ground as he lets go of the iavelin, on June 11. But he said vesterday that he'll compete anyway.

Kenyan boxer is first official doper

In the first doping case of the Athens Olympics, a Kenyan boxer was barred from the games vesterday after failing an out-of-competition drug test in the athletes' village. Bantamweight David Munyasia, 24, tested positive for the banned stimulant cathine, the International Olympic Committee said. (AP)

"She allowed me to pursue my dreams," Candrea said yesterday at a news conference. "She was my wife, my friend. You don't realize how much vou miss someone until they're not there."

For nearly three decades, Sue Candrea was there for her husband, handling the checkbook and running their home as he turned the Arizona softball program into a six-time NCAA champion. Sports was a constant; their wedding date paid homage to Mike's favorite baseball player, Mickey Mantle.

If Mike was in the dugout, Sue was generally nearby in the stands. The couple was to mark their 28th anniversary in Athens, where Candrea - who took over as national team coach two years ago would go for a gold medal. Two special moments at a single Summer Games.

Coach is alone in Athens

Sue's dedication prompted her retirement earlier this year. She gave up her accounting job to travel with her husband and his team. They were on a pre-Olympic "Aiming for Athens" tour, with a stop in Stevens Point, Wis., when Sue fell ill while awaiting a July 16 flight to Connecticut.

The 49-year-old was rushed to the hospital, but died two days later.

"This was a bolt of lightning out of the sky," Candrea said. "One morning, she's walking on the treadmill. And the next moment, she's gone." (AP)

U.S. softball coach Mike Candrea discusses his grief at a news conference in Athens yesterday. His players, two-time defending gold medalists, have dedicated their 2004 effort to his wife's memory.

AT&T CUSTOMERS: FEELING DISCONNECTED?

PERHAPS IT'S TIME TO CONNECT WITH A BETTER PHONE COMPANY.

Ever since AT&T announced they're no longer focusing on home phone service, people like you have been feeling a little, well, disconnected. Being a phone company ourselves, we couldn't imagine putting our customers in such an uncertain position. But then again, we're IDT, and we're different. We don't overcharge our customers, we don't take them for granted, and we don't spend their money on corporate jets and swanky offices. What we do is save people money—at least $15 a month, or in your case, probably a whole lot more. With IDT, you get unlimited local and long distance for just $39.95 a month. You get Caller ID, Call Waiting, Speed Dial and 3-Way Calling—all free. You get reliable service, and we'll handle all the details of switching you over, quickly and painlessly. Perhaps that's why, every single day, thousands more people are connecting with IDT. Care to join them? Just give us a call. We'll be here.

SIMPLE. SENSIBLE. SMART. UNLIMITED LOCAL & LONG DISTANCE $39955* A MONTH 1-800-634-1394

"You're looking for the catch aren't you? We don't blame you—phone companies have been hitting customers with hidden charges for years. We're here to give it to you straight. So here goes. This rate doesn't include the National Carrier Charge, Subscriber Line Charge, Universal Service Fund and taxes (though you're most likely paying similar fees already). This plan covers direct-dialed voice services only. International calling is not included. IDT is available in most areas at the listed rate. You must have active telephone service to enroll. Comparison based on AT&T's One Rate USA^{sy} features vary by plan. That's it. Oh, except this: AT&T is a trademark of AT&T Corporation.
